

DEMAND THAT GRASSY NARROWS AND MORE THAN 100 FIRST NATIONS COMMUNITIES GET ACCESS TO SAFE WATER.

A large, vertical, rusted metal pipe dominates the center of the image. The pipe is filled with a composite image. The top half of the pipe shows a close-up of a woman's face, wearing glasses and looking slightly to the side. The bottom half of the pipe shows a wide-angle, aerial view of a small, isolated community in a snowy, forested landscape. The community consists of several small houses and a central area that looks like a frozen body of water or a cleared area. The surrounding area is covered in snow and dense evergreen trees. The overall tone is somber and highlights the issue of water access in remote communities.
